2. The individual income tax payable by the incentive employees shall be withheld and paid by the Company.

VI. Impact of the Stock Option Exercise on the Company

1. Impact on Shareholding Structure and Listing Conditions

Should all the exercisable stock options be exercised in this period, the Company's total capital stock would increase by 480,780 shares. This would not have a material impact on the Company's shareholding structure, and the Company's share distribution would still meet the listing requirements.

2. Impact on Operational Capability and Financial Condition

The expenses related to these stock options are being amortized over the waiting period and recorded as administrative expenses, with a corresponding increase in capital reserve, in accordance with the relevant accounting standards and systems. Based on the Incentive Plan, assuming all stock options in this period are exercised, the Company's total capital stock would increase by 480,780 shares. The impact on the Company's basic earnings per share and return on equity is expected to be minor. The specific impact will be subject to the data audited by the Company's accounting firm.

3. Impact of Choosing Autonomous Exercise Model on Stock Option Pricing and Accounting Treatment

The Company chooses the Black-Scholes model to calculate the fair value of the stock options on the grant date. Following the accounting treatment method for stock options, no re-evaluation of the stock options is required after the grant date. Therefore, the choice of exercise model does not impact the pricing of the stock options. The Company has already recognized the services received during the period in relevant costs or expenses and capital reserve, based on the fair value of the stock options on the grant date, before the exercise date. On the exercise date, the Company recognizes share capital and share premium based on the actual number of stock options that have been exercised, simultaneously transferring the "capital reserve - other capital reserve" recognized during the waiting period to "capital reserve - share premium". Therefore, the choice of exercise model does not affect the aforementioned accounting treatment. Consequently, the adoption of the autonomous exercise model for the stock options will not have a material impact on their pricing or accounting treatment.
